

BASIC BANKING
PROVIDING SERVICES ACCORDING TO THE
“ACCESS TO BASIC BANKING REGULATIONS ”

“Access to Basic Banking Service Regulations “ was introduced by the Federal Government of Canada. These regulations are aimed at ensuring that basic banking services are available to all individuals. Under these regulations, an individual may open a personal deposit account with a bank or cash certain government cheques as a non-customer, as long as particular conditions are met. This brochure sets out those conditions and also contains other important information you need to know about “Access to Basic Banking”.

I. Account Opening

1. The conditions to be met by an individual who requests a member bank to open a personal deposit account are as follows :

a. the individual shall present to the member bank;

i) two pieces of identification from among those set out in Schedule A or B of this document, at least one of which is from among those set out in Schedule A of this document; or

ii) one piece of identification from among those set out in Schedule A of this document, if the identity of the individual is also confirmed by a client in good standing with the member bank or by an individual of good standing in the community where the member bank is situated;

b. the individuals shall disclose, verbally or in writing, the information listed in Schedule C of this document if the information is not available on the pieces of identification presented by the individual; and

c. if the member bank requests, the individual shall consent to the member bank’s verifying the pieces of identification presented by the individual and to the member bank’s verifying whether any of the following circumstances apply to the individual:

i) if the member bank has reasonable grounds to believe that the personal deposit account will be used for illegal or fraudulent purposes;

ii) if the individual has a history of illegal or fraudulent activity in relation to providers of financial services and if the most recent instance of such activity occurred less than seven years before the day on which the request to open a personal deposit account is made;

- iii) if the member bank has reasonable grounds to believe that the individual, for the purpose of opening the personal deposit account, knowingly made a material misrepresentation in the information provided to the member bank; or
 - iv) if the member bank has reasonable grounds to believe that it is necessary to refuse to open the personal deposit account in order to protect the customers or employees of the member bank from physical harm, harassment or other abuse.
2. If the member bank, based on its verification of the circumstances set out in the above paragraphs
1. (c) (i) – (iv) or the pieces of identification, or based on information, if any, provided by the individual that is related to the request, has reasonable grounds to suspect that the individual is misrepresenting his or her identity, the individual shall present to the member bank one piece of identification from among those set out in Schedule A of this document that bears the individual's photograph and signature.
